THE EDUCATION

For some time past the servants of the State failway Administration who are employed on the service of the permanent way have had a rary legitimate grievance squaint the condi-tions of their employment. The Railway Ad-ministration has very properly insisted that all such employes shall be able to read and write. The assembles of liliterate among them is manupes shall be able to read and write e percentage of illiterates among them is ing steadily; s.g. among the platelayers it dropped from about 80 % to 40 % in years, and in the higher native ranks it almost disappeared.

almost all have realised the importance and value of an education, however unambitious. They have obtained their posts through their knowledge of the three B's, and if their education has not exactly been advanced it has at least sided them to live a hard-working and useful life.

The man employed on the lines between the stations, and indeed on many of the small stations, and indeed on many of the small stations, have little or no chance of educating their children. Though there are 10,000 knt-tabs in Egypt (if we add to the list of Government kutabats, the private kutabas and those administered by the Wakfa) there are not nearly sough—supposing them to be all perfectly organised and in the hands of first-rate teachers—for the needs of the country. And as only 4,000, if as many, are regularly imported by the Government imspectors, and Mr. Dunley has lamented their shortcomings, it is permissible to suppose that a large proportion of them serve no very useful purpose except the teaching by heart of the Korao, which all Moslems support as vigorously as our Anglicar elergy and laity support the teaching of the Bible in primary schools, and no doubt for

FIRE ON NILE FERRY.

EXCITING INCIDENT AT FARASKOUR.

We publish the following extracts from a letter describing the adventures of one of the cotton-worm inspectors, who, we hope, will allow us to compliment him on the courses and coolness he evidently showed under the meet trying circumstances. We withhold the writer's name for the present, as we have not received his parmission to publish it:—

"I arrived asfely on Mondy evening, but not without some scriting experiences, It is really a worder that I am alive to tell the tale, for 10 minutes I was facing death by two neans, burning and drowing; and this show it happened. You must know that to get to Farakour from the station it is necessary to cross the Nile by ferry. The train arrives at the station at 9.15 and as it happened on Monday night there was only one ferry boat, and quite 30 people came in it, besides bringing heaps of baggage and laggage of all sorterons to more one's legs. I was stilling one state of the state of th oil and cotton wool and when it came, dressed their burns and sent them home. But the crowd was immense, and the wailing of the women, the crying of the children, and the crise of agony from the man were enough to turn one's brain. I came up to, my tent and drank mearly hu' a bottle of port, and then went off to their houses to see how they were. They are getting along all right, as the burns were only superficial, but still very large and painful. It was an experience I don't want again in a hurry. I am sure had I not been there they would all have been drowned or burnt to death, as everyone had loss this head. I have not quite got over it yet."

CHRONIQUE FINANCIERE

The marvellous progress which has been made during the past three years in those derelopment of the enthousymous in declaration of the Empire clearly indicates that the days into far distant when the British spinner will not be at the mercy of the United States for his supplies of the raw material. This movement to develop new sources of supply was not initiated a moment too scool. Apart from the obvious absurdity, which discussed in the content of the imply was not initiated a moment-to-seconhart from the obvious absurity, which distendence upon a foreign country for such a commodity suitable state and a suitable state and a commodity suitable state and a suitable state and formed the suitable state and a suitable state of miles of British territory capable of producing it in quantities and quality equalto all home requirements, there was a much more serious superco the quantities developing apace. The United States has not only nearly reached the reconcusic limit in production of the new material, but that country's domestic requirements have been of late years increasing in an adverse ratio to the free shipment abroad of the commodity. In other words, the United States spinners, in a comparatively brief peried of time, provided recognised agricultural and economic lew are not outraged in their interests, will require to look outside their own country for additional supplies of raw outon. Assuming that the rest of the world depended upon India and Egypt—which, had the new outcongrouing districts not been developed, they would unquestionably have done—ruis stared the spinning indistricts of Surope in the face, and consumer everywhere would not only have depended upon America for such supplies of traw material as she chose to release, but for the manufactored products as well.

The development, then, of outton-growing within the British Empire is a matter of importance, not only to the Lancsakire spinner, but consumers of all classes throughout the world. Instead of being dependent as they practically are at present—for Great British takes practically as at present—for Great British takes practically half of the present Indian crop and a very heavy percentage of the Egyptian output, the balance of the former scarcely meeting local requirements and the balance of the latter being so widely distributed that it can accarely be regarded in any one instance as a certain source of supply—upon the United States crop, grown in what is, after all, a comparatively limited area and subject to almost similar weather conditions, the surples outputs of British Colonies and dependencies all over the world will in a few years be available for the consumers of raw dependencies all over the world will in a few years be available for the communes of raw materia. It is impossible to imagine such a state of affairs as the universal stallure of the British crop, considering that we shall be able to draw upon India, Rgryt, South Africa, West Africa, Rast Africa, the West Indies, British North Borneo, Australia and the Malay States, to say nothing of other widely distributed contract for our amoulies.

The cotton thus produced is not a makeshift, and for proof of this assertion one has merely to stroll round the scoellant little exhibition of Britals-grown cotton which has been gott greiter at the Imperial Institute, and is open daily at South Kensington. The exhibition is proof—if such were needed—of the energy which the British Octton Growing Association has displayed in follilling the task it set itself to perform three years ago. As the result of its first year's work cotton to the value of its first year's work cotton to the value of its first year's work cotton to the value of the output should exceed a quarter of a million sterling. This sum, large though it be, it admittedly a mere trifle when placed side by side with the value of our total imports of raw cotton; but it must be remembered that it represents the product of entirely new areas brought under cultivation on scientific lines. The outlay to achieve this result, too, has been comparatively heavy, but had it been a hundred times a large the results can be add to perfectly justify the expenditure.

Omitting retermone in detail to India shed

as large the results can be said to perfectly justify the expenditure.

Omitting reference in detail to India and Egypt—where, however, the areas under cultivation are increasing each year—it is interesting to note the very material progress which has been made in Colonies where the growing of cotton has been initiated by the association. Few people are probably aware of the fact that to United States received its first comignment of cotton-seed is hundred and sevently years ago from the West Indies, vis the Chelese-Physic Gardena. Yet such is the case, and, what is more, these islands during the first year of the last century shipped to Europe no less than ten million pounds of the raw material. In 1886 the scorts had fallen to eight million pounds, and in 1901 they had declined to the infinitesimal total of 2:90.000 pounds. The apparent collapse of what was, undoubtedly, and infinitesimal total of 2:90.000 pounds. The apparent collapse of what was, undoubtedly of the contraction of sugar-growing in the islands. With a lack of crossight many of their descendants have had good cause to regret, the planteer rushed at the new indextry to the detriment of the old, and lafe the supplying of the raw cotton market to the Automation. They have, however, taken justify the expenditure. the new indestry to the distriment of the old, and left that supplying of the raw cotton market to the American Top hare, however, takes to the American Top hare, however, takes to the American Top hare, however, takes in two years they doubted the output of 1901, and at the present below the progression the original to the product of the properties of time, accord the highly respectable total of dances probably the finest Sea, had not not the season of the product o total exports in 1902 amounted to only for owts, the progress which has been made by Egypt's dependency will be understood and appreciated by the statement that in 1904 appreciated by the statement and with com-8,000 acres were under cultivation with com-mercial cotton, the bulk of which was available for export. West Africa is another more than promising cotton-growing centre. Until the Cotton-Growing Association and the Govern ment took matters in hand, the cotton grown ment took matters in hand, the cotten grown by the native; was of little or no commercial value. Experiments with good sasd, under the direction of competent instructors, soon shows of the natives that a new industry, with which they already had an elementary coquantaneo, could be created, and they have worked at it to some purpose. At any rate, are cotton to the value of £7,30 was shipped in 1903, and the outsut now that large area-area going into the cotten to we that large area-area going into the value of £1,330 was shipped in 1903, and the output, now that large areasare going into cultivation, is bound to increase in the near fature. In Natal and in the Transvaal, in Rhodesia and Swaziland, extensive experi-mental plantations are in existence, and from some of these centres good commercial cotton has already been obtained. In East Africa and British Gentral Africa the growing of the Egyptian variety of cotton and the improve-ment of native varieties has been taken in hand. Indeed, in no British possession in the Dark Continent has the preduction of cotton bean shown to be impossible; and when, in some of the colonies, questions of transport and labour have been solved, a steady output from all of them can with confidence be anti-cipated.

In Ania, outside India, some very excellent samples—they are nothing more, however—from the Straits Settlements and the Malay States are shown at the Imperial Institute but the cultivation of the plant suffers from inventants of marginites and control or practices and an uncertain climate, attacks of parasites and lack of labour, so that the difficulties in the way of succe retard private industry, esp of successful production are bound to retard private individuals embarking in the industry, especially when other money-making enterprises are at their hand. North Borneo, however, promises to be an important addition to British Empire ootton areas. The climate it suitable, and the supply of nocessary labour is ample. Cotton grows wild in North, Borneo, as, indeed, it does in nearly all the optree on uncerted above—and efforts are being made to improve the native variety, as well as in to improve the native variety, as well as in-troduce onlivated cotton from India and other recognised producing areas. In Australia the labour problem retards not only the growing of ortoton commercially in Queenstand—there at one time it was somewhat extensively continent. In the Fig. 1 islands a parallal in many ways to the West Indiae can be found. These islands at one time grew cotton extensively, the shipments in 1870 being valued at £39,000, but by 1900 the exports had entirely ceased Canese of a local character led to the collapse of this industry, but efforts are now being made to revive it, and as the principal difficulty in the way of successful cultivation has been removed there is no reason why the Figi Islands should not in a few years time, again figure among the list of shippers of raw cotton to Great Britain. The Imperial Institute Exhibition professes to show the cotton industry from the growing plant to the manufactured product. This it does do in a fashion which it easily understanded of the people. In an hour's time a man of average intelligence can learn more of one of our most important industries by visiting the Institute's little show than be would probably learn from a year's solid reading of books dealing with the subject. Even the wissest and youngest of a can learn something from a glance round these carefully-arranged exhibits. to improve the native variety, as well as in troduce cultivated cotton from India and other

MISUNDERSTOOD

Russia persists in the statement that her army in Manchuris is still anxions and willing to fight. Impartial observer returned from the frost tell us that officers and privates alike are panting for peace, but that the antiborities have for long been terrified at the idea of leading home an army discontented by being led so often into defeat. But this is not the first time often into defeat. But this is not the first time there has been a misunderstanding as to the attitude of Russian troops. An Haglish traveller met a body of Russian peasants, handsuffed and chained together, and being driven like cattle along the road by soldiers. "Dear me !" said he to the officer in charge, "who are these prisoners !" "Prisoners !" re-cohood the officer. "These are not prisoners, They are walgateers —hastening to the front!"

HIS LIFE AND WORK.

(HAROLD SPENDER IN THE "LEISURE HOUR")

"If you want to see all the sights of Cairo," the English resident will tell you, as soon as you reach the Nile from Fort Said, 'you must go to the Zoolegias Gardese on Sunday afternoon and see Lord Cromer." The instruction sounds puzzling, and perhaps a little disrajapecfful to British authority. But if you take the advice, what then 1 After you have seen

The man is grey-haired, but still keen-eyed, strongly built, and brousd of face. He seems more anxious about the baby than either the mother or the nurse. There is no document which sums up bett the difference between the two man—Gener fordon's heroic, restless optimism, as Even in those days Lord Cromer never wasted words.

At that time he was aide de comp to Bir Henry Storks as the Governor of Mata, and weat with Sir Henry on his journey to Jamaics pas a member of the Byre Commission.

Born at Oromer Hall in Norfolk on Feb-ranay 26th, 1811, the son of Henry Baring, he entered Woolwich when still a boy and became a Lieutenant of Artillery in 1836. He worked hard at the military calling, wrote military essays, became a Captain in 1858, and passed through the Saff College. Perhaps he might have stack to the military profession of the control of the control of the control of the profession of the control of the control of the control of the profession of the control of the control of the control of the profession of the control of the cont the Innian Islands in 4:50. He followed Sir-Henry to Malta and thence to Jamaica. In 18724 he went to India as private secretary to his costin, Lord Northbrook, the Viceroy; and at the end of that period he retired defi-nitely from the Array as Major, and passed from the sphere of arms to that of diplomacy. In 1879 he became a Commissioner of the Egyptian Debt, and afterwards one of the Controller-Generals under the dual control. In 1880 he went back to India as the Financial Member of the Council of India in succession to Sir John Strabely, and remained there to the try to state quite simply and briefly some of his shelf-reforms.

He found Egypt just emerged from the balkroptey which had been broight upon her balkroptey had deposed ismail, secured the incomes of the bond-holders, but left the pessantry of Egypt lightle better off than they were before. The fellaheen ware still ground down with a hundred taxes and exactions. They were still deside the provision of the provision of passant for work, was according, except for sadden levies in time of ind. Conscription was put on a rational basis—the number of soldiers limited, the years of service out down, and the treatment entirely changed. The spick and-span Egyptian soldier whom you see in Cairo to day, the smart hero of Atbars and Omdurman, is an entirely different being from the poor weeping wretch who was driven away in chains from his village to die in the Sodan.

The next step was to reduce taxation, and that process is still unfinished. But the severest burdens have been relaxed. The kar on sheep and goats, the fax on all triades and erafts, the tax on fishing—all these, and many other smaller but still oppressive bordens have been remitted. The tax on land must be retained as the chief source of reverdie in an argicultural country; but it has been immensely reduced, especially in the poorer provinces. Railway rates have been continually lowered, and everything is still being done to obsepte transit and encourage trade.

Lord Cromer has not been content with thing is still being done to chespen transit and encourage trade. Lord Oromer has not been content with merely removing bordens. Egypt is the only country in the world where the skill and ingenuity of the State can double or trable the richnes of the soil, for Egypt is, in Herodotox old phrase, the "sift of the Nile." Its iterally cervists of the roll brought down by the Nile, and depends ygarly for its crops on the Nile comes back to coefs mind with a corrious rebound when one thinks of Lord Cromer today:

"We seldom realise our position. In ten or twelve years 'time Baring, Lord Wolseley, myzelf, Revlyza Wood, etc., will have no teeth and will be dad; some of us will be quite passe; no one will come, and soont me: new Barings, new Lord Wolseleys and have been streen, who will call us blocks and a "twaddlers."

Not tan, nor twelve, but more than twenty for year have passed, yet Lord Cromer is still the contral, and one of the most youthful, figures in Egypt.

After the fall of Khartonm Sir Relyn, Baring reserved that policy of shandoning the thought of the standon of the street with the condition of Egyptism shad any ported." General Gordon in every way, even to the extent of backing him yet had any ported. "General Gordon in every way, even to the extent of backing him yet had any ported." General Gordon and jums seem shabelot Lord Wolseley, though he had vested Gordon's possible to dad with Egypt alons, without the embarrassment of Anziel and expenses contaide.

A clevr account of what Lord Cromer did during this decade of peace has been written once and for all by Lord Milner in his "England in Egypt."

Let me try to state quite simply and briefly some of his chief reforms.

He found Egypt just emerged from the lankruptey which had been broight upon he hard words and the province of the individual control of the Cromer did during this decade of peace has been written once and for all by Lord Milner in his "England in Egypt."

Let me try to state quite simply and briefly some of his chief reforms.

He found Egypt just emerged from the lankruptey which had been broight upon he by the "wild-cas" "profligacy and extravagance of the Khelvie Ismail. The Powers Bard in tremed—but not to save Egypt. They had deposed Ismail, secured—the incomes of the Willed State of the Will famine.

The truest test of prosperity in the East is always population, and if we apply that to Egypt we find that Lord Conner's policy has produced the most astonishing results Estemen 1882 and 1897 the population increased by 43 per cent. It went up from nearly 7,000,000 to mearly 10,000,000, and though the rate of increase has happily moderated stilled, it is still going on a stay great peak.

nearly 10,000,000, and though the rate or increase has happily moderated a fittle, it is still going on at a great pace. The devastating agesties have been checked and the fertilising agencies encouraged.

Such is Lord Orient's role.

If you wish to realise the increased wealth and happiness of Egypt under all these measures, you must ride, or walk, as we did for several months at the beginning of the villages of Egypt. As you watch the people at their work and listen to their songs and laughter, note their clean clothes and bright faces, their morty children and happy, child-hearted women, you gain an impression of happiness. women, you gain an impression of ha which, alas I you no longer find on the o side of old England.

Coton. Samedi et lumii il ya eu de la formeté et de la hauses sur les contrats ; les deux jours suivant, nous avors été un pu plus calmes, quoique soutenus ; jeudi la faiblesse a prévala sur des réalisations en prévision d'un Bureau favorable à la récolte américaine et finalement aujoural l'ai, parès avoir commence la matinés en bonne tendance, le recul constaté en clettre d'hier s'est accentral. Que pour certaines séances l'activité ait été plas ou moins grande ou que la spéculation se soit montrée par moments plus ou moins bien disposée, la résumé de tout cela est que nous finissons en baisse de 1/8 de tallarie euviron sur Vendredi dernier, ce qui équivant aux douze ou quatorra points perdas par New-York depnis lors. Nons n'avors done fait que sivire l'Amérique pas à pas, comme du reste o'est le cas depnis quelque temps, et aans le rapport measund de Washington qui est venu créer une diversion passagère et faire nattre une petite gitation parmi le monde de la Bourae, nous n'amions, pour cette fois, aboul-ment rien su d'intéressant à ceregistrer, les faits locaux syant costincié sons faire défeat ux ayant continué à nous faire défaut ment rien au d'intéressant à envegistre, les faits locaux spant cortinué à nous faire défant d'une façon complète.

Mais si la marche de la vieille récolte a été toute pacifique at uniquement guidée par celle de l'Américain, in êue a pas été de même pour eq un regarde l'Acôt. La persistance de la dermade pour certains clasements en disponible et les prix que l'exportation a payée, la main plutôt forcée que de bonne grace, ont produit du raffermissement, qui a fini par se traduire par une hanses totale du 11/16 sur le cours de Vendredi dernier.

Dans nos précidentes revues, nous avions hien signalé les besoins en fully good fair et good Mit Affi qui restaient à couvirr pour pediques filateurs ; nous avions égalercent prévules gros embarquements qui ont fourni le pressire point d'sppni aux haussiers sur la récolte actuelle ; mais, au fond et contrairement à on qui arrive, nous étions persuadés que les venders aurainet dét les premiers à faire des concessions pour arriver à liquider l'Août. Nous nous sommes trompés sur ce point en outre pour en present agrén ne l'aunait suppoé, qu'il n'y avait qu'un seul détenteur des qualités voulnes, le groupe qu'il avait reçu le Mai, et que ce détenteur devait tout naturellement chercher à tirer profit de la moindre cir constance.

du dit rapport, à préparer l'opinion publique, nous le prouve amplement. Cela ne les dans l'article, après avoir créé je découvert

conditions climatériques viennent leur fournir
un prétext pleusible.
En attendant, les personnes compétentes disent que, sand par la sécheroses, in l'y a jamais eu de récolte réellement attainte en Auérique et cette année c'est de l'excès de ploiss que l'on se plaint.
Ches nous, la récolte va admirablement bien et le résumé de la Produce Association pour loin, en est une preuve éloquente.

P.S.—Minochester chible que les filateurs du Lonachire.

Closing prices are 1 @ 8 points below those of last Thoractey, in such ussestited market conditions it is impossible to form any decided opinion, but in view of the Bureau report to be issued this day wook, the 3rd proximo, we do not auticipate any very decided movement, but rather frequent anai probably sharp fluctuations.

OUR LONDON LETTER.

(PROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

London, July 28.

London, July 28.

The King left Victoria Station by special train on Wednesday morning for Chatham, where he unveiled the Royal Engineers' war memorial, and, opened the new naval hospital. His Majesty arrived at noon at Enchester Enales Station, where the Mayors and Town Clerks of Rechester, Chatham and Gillingham were presented. Through gaily decorated streets the Royal party drove to Chatham. After the first ceremony, Inuch was served at the Royal Engineers' mess.

To the address of welcome presented on behalf of the Corporation of Chatham the King replied as follows: "I thank you for your loyal address, and I am much gratified by the hearty welcome with which the town of Chatham again received me. It is my sincere with that constant progress and the full measures of property may be gratted to your town, which has such close relations with my naval and utilitary services, and I am glad that one of the perposes of my present visit is the opening of a new and fine hospital for the relief and benefit of the men belonging to my Navy. I cordially associate myself with you in hoping that the memorial which is to-day unveiled may be trasumed in your midst as a roord of the loyal devotion and beneium of officers and men of the Royal Edipters who consummated their of the Royal Engineers who consummated their services to their country by dying in her cause.'
Both the King and the Duke of Connaught Both the King and the Dake of Connaught, who accompanied him, wore the undress uni form of a field marshal. The King was at tended by Major Holford and Colonel Davidson, and General Sir Neville Lyttelton also travelled. The Home Secretary had been present at Victoria to see the King off.

The memorial is placed immediately opposite the Grimean Memorial Arch, being between the inner parade of Brompton Barracks and the forecourt of the Rayal Bagineer's lastitute. A principal feature of the atructur is a series of panels in high relief deploiting the various works effected by sappers in war time. Two other panels in high relief deploiting the Two other panels in High relief and Wagon Hill, where the Begineers particularly distinguished themselver, sar required to complete the series. All the pictures have an historical value, insamuch as they are based upon photographs of actual incidents and seenes. The keystones of the arch are figures of Victory, and the broad piers at the abutments have latrian marble tablets, on which was excorded in leaded latters the names of the officers, warrant officers, non-commissioned. nessented in leaded letters and recorded in leaded letters, warrant officers, non-commissioned loars, and mean-some 420 in all—of the sgular, Militia, and Volunteer Eugineers who at their lives in the South African war.

Wednesday was a great day for Wimbleden, the continued of the continued of

When they arrived at Boadices's statue the Charter Mayor and the Town Clerk of Win-bledon left their carriage, and introduced themselves first to Alderman Sir John Pound and Lady Pound, the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress, who were in the second carriage, and then to the Sheriff, Sir Gowen Woodman, who was accompanied by Lady Woodman. As the half-hour struck they procession drove across the bridge for Wimbledon.

On their raturn at noon the charter procession was received with belitting bonors. On arriving at the borough boundary the procession was not by forty-seven carriages, mostly occupied by distinguished greests, and the town clerk read portions of the charter, after which a military band played "God Save the King." The procession then moved to the town-hall, where the charter was read in full and a short seligious service held. A luncheon followed, at which the Lord Mayor presided. In the evening the school children and the old people were untertained, and there was a military tattoo, a torch-light procession, and a bondire on the common.

Autre temps, autres meurs, and this generation has surely reached the lowest depths of Parliamentary ill manners. Hardly a day can pass without some one being secessively read and offensive to semebody else in the Hones of Commons. The poisson of discontracy has infected most persons and all parties. Mr. Churchilli Sofienive rancour, directed against the Prima Minister, who sets the best example to others less courteous than himself, i well known, and "C.B." has lately tried the indugence accorded to an offensively steplic, if naturally anniable, gentleman very far. But it is only just to schnowledge that the conduct of those who minisked Mr. Churchill's stammer was quite as bad and inscreashle as that of those who minuted Mr. Churchill's stam mer was quite as bed and inscorable as that of their opponents. There are still gentlemen in the House. But the air of Westminster seems to nullify the effects of good breeding and education. There is no chance of Parlia ment's regaining its hold on public esteen until it mends its manners.

It is now some four months since the Commission of figuing into the alleged atrocities in the Congo returned to Belgium, and their report has not yet been issued. But there has just been polished what might be described as a bowdlerised summary of the evidence have, and their seven in the congo Reform Association, of which Lord Beauchamp is president, and which has a most distinguished committee of peers and members of Parliament. It confines itself entirely to the testimony given before the Commission, without a word of commest. And the conclusion to be drawn from reading its pages is that the atrocities and outrages which such that the terrible reality transends the pictures painted from transitory glimpees of incidents shich had hitherto leaked out. What we read in this book is sufficiently revolting. But there are worse things that it omits. They are unprintable. It is no longer possible for the charges against the Congo Administration to be denied or palliated. The next move must still—reform.

Since the motor took possession of the land the public have begun to realist how important is the question of roads, their maintenance and their construction. And now we see a definite result of this awakaning in the introduction of a Highways Bill, which seeks to contact a contral department charged with the control of old reads and the construction on a definite plan of new ones. It is premature to cantrast the procise merits of the whole proposal, which includes a provision to classify certain reads as "hasional reads," but its initiation must lead to a quickening of interest that will not be smills. Perhaps the first highway problem awarding solution is that of dust, which has become a maintain the checked in the interests both of pedestrians, householders, and motorists. It is time, too, that wider and better roads were made that should bring us up to the level of Fance in this matter, and it is extremely important that the construction of new suborban thoroughfares should be intelligent and farnighted. The objects of the new Bill are really less surprising than its tartly introduction.

We have made very considerable progress in

We have made very considerable progress in our prison system, both as regards principle and practice, during the past contray or so. But in some matters the law and its represen-tatives continue most egregically assinies, to put it at its inildest. That a Chinese prisoner, incarrer rated forthe beinous crime of smuggling tobace, should have had his pigtail out off by the prison harbert is an illustration of stunidity consect, anould have had his pigtal out off by the priron barber is an illustration of stephiti; and brotality which is not to be accessed by any plas of adherence to regulations or routine. In another case, which is a bresent attracting a good dral of attention—that of the Darkmon princers whose portraits have anneaded. a good dral of attention—that of the Dartmoor princenes whose portraits have appeared on picture potential where a potential have a potential that the lank of proper regulations which has caused a lapse no less discreditable to the authorities concerned. Each of these cases points to a lack of appreciation of the fact that the value of prison discipline lies not in its pentitive, but in its reformatory effect. The object should be torestore, not farther to impair, the prisoner's self-respect.

And interesting suggestion has been put forward in some quarters as to the possibility of feeding underfed London school children from the cookery centres in the metropolis. Probably no one can speak with greater expert knowledge on the subject than the Superintendent of the National School of Cookery. Her opinion can be summed up in one sentence "I do not think it is possible under the exist "I do not think it is possible under the existing conditions," she said to a press representative. "Shough time is not allowed for the teaching of school, children pupils at present. If they had to prepare meals for the underfed scholars their opportunities for learning would be seriously hindered A child, who may come either from a non-provided achool or a London Counties school attends the class here, according to the existing regulations, for two hours once a week during the school year. The girl thes gests forty hours' utilion, half of which is spent in listening to lectures.

"I have, however, during the last week, re-ceived some information from an Australian lady as to a scheme by which cheap meals are produced by school children at the cookery centres in that country. There the children attend the class for a whole day once a week for a period of six months. With such a sysproduced by school children at the cookey centres in that country. In reply to a question as to how far such a system might be adopted here, the superintendent said she thought it showed what as possible. Samaid did his best. He took his master to the Louvre, to the Bois, to the Jardin des him to the Eisfiel Tower, the Comédie Frauçaise, the Morgue, and other places of amusement. He shwed him motor-cars, airahips, a a most acrogue, and other places of amusement. He showed him motor-cars, airships, as

and the King yawned them wearily away; he brought M. Heari Brisson to talk to him, and the Sibah remained glum. Nor did his long

In despair at their master's melancholy, his faithful servantu extried him on to the baloony
of his hotel, which overlooks the Champe

But as Samaid called "Alloh ! Alloh !" an made other remarks into the instrument another ran to him with the glad news: "The master smiles." Two old ladies were trying to oss the Champs Elysées.

FRENCH FLEET'S VISIT.

As already announced by telegraph, on the occasion of the visit of the French Fleet to Fortemouth the officers will be entertained to lanchoon by the House of Commons in Westminster Hall. It is proposed that the entertainment should take place on Saturday, August 19. The suggestion was brought under the notice of members by the disiff Government Whip, Sir A. Acland-Hood, and the chief Opposition Whip, Mr. H. Gladstons, who together signed a circular on the subject issued
